A film by Helena Norberg-Hodge, Steven Gorelick & John Page

the Economics of Happiness

Voices from six continents, including:
Vandana Shiva, Bill McKibben, David Korten, Michael Shuman
Samdhong Rinpoche, Andrew Simms, Richard Heinberg, Juliet Schor,
Chris Johnstone, Clive Hamilton, Keibo Oiwa, Rob Hopkins

A Local Futures Production

www.localfutures.org
Awards

Best in Show
Cinema Verde Environmental Film Festival, 2011

Award of Merit
Accolade Film Competition, 2011

Honor Award
Skipping Stones Magazine, 2011

Film Festivals

Environmental Film Festival in the Nation’s Capital
Washington, DC

Green Film Festival in Seoul
South Korea

Byron Bay Film Festival
Australia

Peace and Sustainable Living Documentary Film Festival
Hong Kong

Green Mountain Film Festival
Vermont

Strawberry Earth Film Festival
Amsterdam

Cape May Film Festival
New Jersey

OLAFest
Florida

World Film Festival Kelowna
British Columbia

Siskiyou Film Festival
Oregon

Awareness Festival
Los Angeles
What People Are Saying About the Film

“A powerful new film that cuts deeply to the heart of the global crisis. Magnificent!”
– David Suzuki
television host and environmentalist

“The Economics of Happiness takes hold of the baton dropped by former Vice-President Al Gore’s An Inconvenient Truth and runs it all the way to the finish.”
– Andrew Dash Gillman
Local First Utah

“It’s a superb movie. I think it ought to win an Academy Award.”
– Rob Kall
Executive Director, OpEdNews

“A rare, thought-provoking and inspiring new film, sure to make BIG NEWS in the local/global debate.”
– The Santa Barbara Independent

“It is good news indeed to find so persuasive an explanation of our ailing world as The Economics of Happiness. This film connects the dots between climate chaos, economic meltdown, and our own personal suffering—stress, loneliness, and depression. It presents the localization movement as a systemic alternative to corporate globalization, as well as a strategy that brings community and meaning to our lives.”
– Joanna Macy
author of World as Lover, World as Self

“The Economics of Happiness offers a unique global perspective on a movement that is often reduced as being too small. Not so. The film tells the story of a grassroots movement for localization that is bubbling up from the cracks of a faltering global economy, in every corner of the world. These are the real ‘green shoots’ to be hopeful about.”
– Anuradha Mittal
Executive Director, The Oakland Institute

“This is the best, most holistic film I have seen on the subject.”
– Jacob Bommann-Larsen
Nordic New Economy Network

“While some American reviewers have predicted an Oscar for Best Documentary, others have said that this will do for localization/globalization schism what An Inconvenient Truth did for our understanding of climate change.”
– Roger Hanney
Alternative Media Group of Australia

“A must-see film for the future of the planet.”
– Zac Goldsmith
Member of UK Parliament

“Helena Norberg-Hodge delivers a powerful message about globalization: It is the small, local economies around the world that are preserving traditions, cultures, and communities, and ultimately safeguarding our happiness.”
– Alice Waters
chef, author, and the proprietor of Chez Panisse

“...it is a great honor for me to endorse such an historic work.”
– Samdhong Rinpoche
Prime Minister of Tibetan government in exile
Synopsis (Short)

“Going local” is a powerful strategy to help repair our fractured world—our ecosystems, our societies and our selves.

A central paradox defines our time: although the economy is growing, we are working longer and longer hours and our new comforts and luxuries have not brought us happiness. While the ever-expanding global economy is creating immense wealth for the few, it is leaving the majority worse off. Climate change, unstable financial markets, growing inequality, senseless war, fundamentalism: people know something is fundamentally wrong. Across the world they are coming together in the spirit of resistance and renewal. A movement is growing to re-create more just and sustainable communities and re-invent economies based on a new paradigm—an economics of happiness.

Synopsis (Full)

Economic globalization has led to a massive expansion in the scale and power of big business and banking. It has also worsened nearly every problem we face: fundamentalism and ethnic conflict; climate chaos and species extinction; financial instability and unemployment. There are personal costs too. For the majority of people on the planet, life is becoming increasingly stressful. We have less time for friends and family and we face mounting pressures at work.

The Economics of Happiness describes a world moving simultaneously in two opposing directions. On the one hand, an unholy alliance of governments and big business continues to promote globalization and the consolidation of corporate power. At the same time, people all over the world are resisting those policies, demanding a re-regulation of trade and finance—and, far from the old institutions of power, they’re starting to forge a very different future. Communities are coming together to re-build more human scale, ecological economies based on a new paradigm— an economics of localization.

The film shows how globalization breeds cultural self-rejection, competition and divisiveness; how it structurally promotes the growth of slums and urban sprawl; how it is decimating democracy. We learn about the obscene waste that results from trade for the sake of trade: apples sent from the UK to South Africa to be washed and waxed, then shipped back to British supermarkets; tuna caught off the coast of America, flown to Japan to be processed, then flown back to the US. We hear about the suicides of Indian farmers; about the demise of land-based cultures in every corner of the world.

The second half of The Economics of Happiness provides not only inspiration, but practical solutions. Arguing that economic localization is a strategic solution multiplier that can solve our most serious problems, the film spells out... the policy changes needed to enable local businesses to survive and prosper. We are introduced to community initiatives that are moving the localization agenda forward: urban gardens in Detroit, Michigan; the Transition Town movement in Totnes, UK; and hands-on education in Yokahama, Japan. We see the benefits of an expanding local food movement that is restoring biological diversity, communities and local economies worldwide. And we are introduced to Via Campesina, the largest social movement in the world, with more than 400 million members.

We hear from a chorus of voices from six continents, including Vandana Shiva, Bill McKibben, David Korten, Samdhong Rinpoche, Helena Norberg-Hodge, Michael Shuman, and Keibo Oiwa. They tell us that climate change and peak oil give us little choice: we need to localize, to bring the economy home. The good news is that as we move in this direction we will begin not only to heal the earth but also to restore our own sense of well-being. The Economics of Happiness challenges us to restore our faith in humanity, challenges us to believe that it is possible to build a better world.

Technical Specifics

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name of Film:</th>
<th>The Economics of Happiness</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Produced by:</td>
<td>Helena Norberg-Hodge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Written and Directed by:</td>
<td>Helena Norberg-Hodge, Steven Gorelick and John Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Production Countries:</td>
<td>USA, Nicaragua, France, Germany, UK, Australia, India, Thailand, Japan, and China.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Production Years:</td>
<td>2005-2010</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Screening Format:</td>
<td>Color DVD PAL or NTSC, Region “0”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Running Time:</td>
<td>68 minutes</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Film Website:</td>
<td>www.localfutures.org</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Poster Download:</td>
<td>www.localfutures.org/wp-content/uploads/EoH_postcardrevised.jpg</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Online screener:</td>
<td>contact info@localfutures.org for link and password</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B-roll clips and stills:</td>
<td>contact info@localfutures.org for link.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
A Note from Producer and Director
Helena Norberg-Hodge

After five years of production we are pleased to announce the release of The Economics of Happiness.

At the International Society for Ecology & Culture, we have spent the last three decades raising awareness of the underlying causes of the many crises we face today. From climate change to terrorism, financial insecurity to the epidemic of depression—we have argued that most of our most pressing problems can be traced back to an unsustainable global economic system. More importantly, we have pointed to a strategic way to address these problems simultaneously: economic localization.

The Economics of Happiness offers not only a big-picture analysis of globalization, but a powerful message of hope for the future. The thinkers and activists we interviewed for the film come from every continent, and represent the interests of the great majority of people on the planet today. Their message is unambiguous: in order to respect and revitalize diversity, both cultural and biological, we need to localize economic activity. They argue that a systemic shift—away from globalizing economic activity and towards the local—allows us to reduce our ecological footprint while increasing human well-being.

When people start connecting the dots between climate change, global economic instability and their own personal suffering—stress, loneliness, depression—there is the potential for a movement that will truly change the world. Featuing a wealth of diverse perspectives, the film illustrates these often hidden connections. We go beyond the narrow analysis of the mainstream to show that antagonism between human needs and the needs of nature is not inevitable.

Resistance to further economic globalization has created powerful new alliances: deep ecologists linking hands with labor unionists, independent businessmen collaborating with small farmers. Now, at the grassroots, localization is also bridging divides in a completely new way—bringing people together across ethnic, religious, economic and even partisan divides.

We have found the process of making this film incredibly inspiring. Simply to see the multitude of grassroots movements afoot has been heartening—a testimony to human goodwill and resilience. We hope that The Economics of Happiness will bring the same inspiration to viewers around the world. It provides insight, hope, reassurance and above all, motivation to join in the growing localization movement. Bringing the economy closer to home can not only save us from environmental and economic catastrophe, it can help us to re-discover those essential relationships—both with the living world and with one another—that ultimately give our lives meaning and joy.
Producer Helena Norberg-Hodge

Author and filmmaker Helena Norberg-Hodge is the founder and director of Local Futures. A pioneer of the ‘new economy’ movement, she has been promoting an economics of personal, social, and ecological well-being for more than thirty years. She has authored several books, including the inspirational classic Ancient Futures: Learning from Ladakh and Local is Our Future: Steps to an Economics of Happiness. She has given public lectures in seven languages, and has appeared in broadcast, print, and online media worldwide, including MSNBC, The London Times, The Sydney Morning Herald, and The Guardian. She was honored with the Right Livelihood Award (or ‘Alternative Nobel Prize’) for her groundbreaking work in Ladakh, and received the 2012 Goi Peace Prize for contributing to “the revitalization of cultural and biological diversity, and the strengthening of local communities and economies worldwide.”

Co-Director Steven Gorelick

Steven Gorelick is author of Small is Beautiful, Big is Subsidized and co-author of Bringing the Food Economy Home. Gorelick’s work has been featured in The Ecologist and Resurgence magazines. He currently serves as Managing and Programs Director for Local Futures, and frequently teaches and speaks on local economics around the US. He also runs a small-scale organic farm with his wife and two children in Vermont.

Co-Director John Page

Trained as a barrister, John Page was instrumental in establishing Local Futures’ partner organizations in Ladakh. In addition, he produced and directed the award-winning film Ancient Futures, as well as the short documentaries The Future of Progress and Local Futures. He is co-author of From the Ground Up: Rethinking Industrial Agriculture. His series of photographs depicting the spread of the global monoculture have been used by NGOs around the world.
Voices from the Film

Jan Barham

Jan Barham, the Mayor of Byron Shire, is the first member of the Green Party elected mayor in Australia. She has been involved with local environment groups and the Green Party for almost two decades.

Ronald Colman

Ronald Colman is founder and Executive Director of GPIAtlantic. Colman taught for 20 years at the university level and was a researcher and speech-writer at the United Nations. He has researched and written many reports on indicators of community wellbeing and environmental quality. Colman advises governments and communities internationally on indicator work, and regularly speaks on the subject to interested groups.

Eliana Amparo Apaza Espillico

Eliana Espillico is a member of PRATEC—El Proyecto Andino de Tecnologias Campesinas (The Andean Project of Peasant Technologies), based in the Peruvian Andes. The group works to affirm and invigorate Andean culture and peasant agriculture and provide solutions to the cultural erosion and socioeconomic problems of Andean populations.

Zac Goldsmith

Zac Goldsmith is an internationally renowned environmentalist and a Conservative MP for Richmond Park in the UK. For nine years Goldsmith served as editor of the popular environmental magazine, The Ecologist. His latest book is The Constant Economy: How to Build a Stable Society.

Daniel Greenberg

Daniel Greenberg is Executive Director of Living Routes, an ecovillage study-abroad program in Massachusetts, and a member of the Global Ecovillage Educators for Sustainable Earth. Greenberg has studied and directed community-based educational programs for over 20 years. He has developed accredited educational programs around the world.

Clive Hamilton

Clive Hamilton is a public intellectual and Professor of Public Ethics at the Centre for Applied Philosophy and Public Ethics, a joint centre of the Australian National University, Charles Sturt University and the University of Melbourne. Hamilton is a best-selling author whose books include Growth Fetish; Scorcher: The Dirty Politics of Climate Change; and The Freedom Paradox: Towards a Post-secular Ethics.

Richard Heinberg

Richard Heinberg is Senior Fellow of the Post Carbon Institute and is widely regarded as one of the world’s foremost experts on oil depletion and its consequences. He is the award-winning author of eight books including: Powerdown: Options and Actions for a Post-Carbon World and Blackout. Heinberg has authored scores of articles that have appeared in such journals as The Ecologist, The American Prospect, Public Policy Research, and YES! magazine.

Rob Hopkins

Rob Hopkins is the co-founder of Transition Town Totnes and of the Transition Network. He is author of many articles and the popular book The Transition Handbook: From Oil Dependence to Local Resilience. He is the winner of the 2008 Schumacher Award, an Ashoka Fellow, a Fellow of the Post Carbon Institute, and a Trustee of the Soil Association.
Pracha Hutanuwatr

Pracha Hutanuwatr is an author and scholar of globalization and socially engaged Buddhism from Thailand. He is Director of the Wongsanit Ashram near Bangkok; Program Director for Grassroots Leadership Training; and a board member of the Spirit in Education Movement. His latest book is Asian Futures: Dialogues for Change (co-authored with Ramu Manivannan).

Chris Johnstone

Chris Johnstone is a specialist in positive social and psychological change. Johnstone works in the British NHS as an addictions specialist, teaches at several universities and has lectured around the world. He is editor of The Great Turning Times and author of the book, Find Your Power.

David Korten

David Korten is president and founder of the People-Centered Development Forum, co-founder and board chair of the Positive Futures Network, and a board member of the Business Alliance for Local Living Economies. He has published hundreds of articles and several books, including Agenda for a New Economy: From Phantom Wealth to Real Wealth; and When Corporations Rule the World.

Rodrigo Lopes

Rodrigo Lopes is a leader of the Brazilian Landless Workers Movement (MST), which has successfully pressured the Brazilian government to redistribute unused land to millions of landless peasants. He has overseen several social agroecology projects throughout the MST settlements. He has also served as an administrator of the National Florestan Fernandes School of Agrarian Reform in the state of Sao Paulo.

Bill McKibben

Keibo Oiwa

Keibo Oiwa is a cultural anthropologist, environmentalist, prominent public figure and professor of International Studies at Meiji Gakuin University. Oiwa is founder of the Sloth Club, Japan's leading 'Slow Life' environmental group. His books include Slow Is Beautiful and The Japan We Never Knew: A Journey of Discovery (co-authored with David Suzuki). Oiwa lives in Yokohama with his family.

Mohau Pheko

Mohau Pheko is Coordinator of the African Gender and Trade Network (GENTA), based in South Africa. GENTA delivers economic and social research to parliamentarians, women’s organizations and civil servants. As an independent political economist she has advised governments, corporations and international aid programs.

Samdhong Rinpoche

Samdhong Rinpoche was elected as the first Prime Minister of the Tibetan Government-in-Exile in 2001. In addition to being a prominent political leader, he has served as the director of the Central Institute for Higher Tibetan Studies, and has led a distinguished career as a spiritual teacher, professor and leading Tibetan scholar of Buddhism and Gandhian thought.
Khyentse Norbu Rinpoche

Khyentse Norbu is a Bhutanese lama and an accomplished filmmaker whose films include The Cup and Travellers and Magicians. Recognized as the main incarnation of Dzongsar Khyentse (1894-1959) he has studied since childhood with many masters, including H.H. Dilgo Khyentse Rinpoche.

Mary-Jayne Rust

Mary-Jayne Rust is an internationally recognized Jungian analyst and art therapist. She has been writing and lecturing on the links between psychotherapy and environmental issues for many years. Her work has appeared in Resurgence; The Journal of Psychotherapy and Politics International; and Therapy Today.

Juliet Schor

Juliet Schor taught at Harvard University for 17 years before becoming Professor of Sociology at Boston College. She is a respected scholar of economic sociology and consumerism, and a best-selling author whose books include Born to Buy: The Commercialized Child and the New Consumer Culture; and The Overworked American: The Unexpected Decline of Leisure.

Balaji Shankar

Balaji Shankar is founder of the Kumarrappa Foundation, an NGO committed to Gandhian economic thought, the maintenance of self-reliant villages and “economies of permanence.” Shankar is also a successful organic farmer, producing numerous indigenous varieties of legumes, rice, ragi, millets, fruit trees, vegetables and dairy products. His organic farming techniques have been featured in The Hindu newspaper.

Vandana Shiva

Vandana Shiva is a physicist, ecofeminist, environmental activist and author. She is founder and director of the organization Navdanya, and is currently based in New Delhi. She has written numerous books and hundreds of papers in leading scientific and technical journals. Her latest books include Soil Not Oil and Earth Democracy. She is the recipient of the 1993 Right Livelihood Award, also known as the “Alternative Nobel Prize”.

Michael Shuman

Michael Shuman is an expert in community-based economic development and currently serves as Director of Research and Public Policy for BALLE. He has authored or edited seven books, including The Small Mart Revolution: How Local Businesses Are Beating the Global Competition and Going Local: Creating Self-Reliant Communities in the Global Age.

Charles Simmons

Charles Simmons teaches journalism and media law at Eastern Michigan University. He is the Co-Chair of the Committee for the Political Resurrection of Detroit and is on the board of directors of Detroitors Working for Environmental Justice. His articles have appeared in national and international newspapers, magazines and academic journals.

Andrew Simms

Andrew Simms is Policy Director at the New Economics Foundation. He is the author of the reports The Green New Deal, Clone Town Britain and the books Tescopoly: How One Shop Came Out on Top and Why it Matters and Ecological Debt: Global Warming and the Wealth of Nations. He serves on the board of Greenpeace UK.
About Local Futures

Local Futures works to renew ecological, social and spiritual well-being by promoting a systemic shift towards economic localization. A pioneer of the new economy movement, Local Futures has been raising awareness for four decades about the need to shift direction – away from dependence on global monopolies, and towards decentralized, regional economies. Local Futures produces books, films, and other ‘education for action’ tools, and organizes activist-oriented conferences and workshops worldwide. These programs are helping to catalyze a global movement for change.

Local Futures began as The Ladakh Project more than thirty years ago in the Himalayan region of Ladakh. The organization initially focused on supporting Ladakh’s indigenous culture by bringing information to balance the idealized images of Western culture flooding into the region through tourism and development. In 1986, founder and director Helena Norberg-Hodge won the Right Livelihood Award for her groundbreaking work in the region. In 1988 Helena’s book, Ancient Futures: Learning from Ladakh, was first published, and an award-winning film of the same name was soon produced. In 2011 Local Futures released the award-winning film The Economics of Happiness on four continents.

Films By and About Local Futures

Paradise with Side Effects follows two Ladakhi women on a trip to England as part of a Local Futures “reality tour.” These reality tours introduce Ladakhi participants to everyday life in the West as it really is, thereby helping to balance the glamorized images of the modern world that are generated by tourism, advertising and the media. Director Claus Schenk originally made this film for German and French television.

Local Futures (1998)

A sequel to the Ancient Futures film, giving examples of Local Futures’ systemic approach to the problems of the global economy. Challenges the commonly-held belief that globalization is inevitable or “evolutionary” and argues that we need to reduce the distance between consumers and producers to strengthen local economies and communities.

Ancient Futures: Learning From Ladakh (1993)

Ancient Futures: Learning from Ladakh is based on Helena Norberg-Hodge’s book of the same title. In America, it won several film festival awards, including a “Gold Apple” at the National Educational Film and Video Festival. In England it was a lead film at the London International Environmental Film Festival. It was also broadcast nationwide on Canadian television, as part of David Suzuki’s popular series, “The Nature of Things”.

Ancient Futures provides a richly intimate look at the traditional culture of Ladakh, and an unflinching description of the psychological, social, and environmental costs of western-style “modernization”. The film chronicles some of the negative impacts that unfolded in Ladakh after it was opened to “development” in 1975, challenging viewers to re-examine the meaning of “progress”.

Together with the book, Ancient Futures has been translated into more than forty languages. In all of these languages and many more, people around the world have told us, “This is our story too.”

The Future of Progress (1992)

Economics of Happiness

Produced by Helena Norberg-Hodge
Written and directed by Helena Norberg-Hodge, Steven Gorelick and John Page

“A powerful new film that cuts deeply to the heart of the global crisis. Magnificent!”
-David Suzuki, Television presenter and environmentalist

A documentary about the worldwide movement for economic localization

Featuring a chorus of voices from six continents, including Vandana Shiva, Khyentse Norbu Rinpoche, Bill McKibben, Pracha Hutanuwatr, David Korten, Rodrigo Lopes, Michael Shuman, Samdhong Rinpoche, Rob Hopkins, Keibo Oiwa, and Juliet Schor.

From the makers of the award-winning film Ancient Futures: Learning from Ladakh

Local Futures
PO Box 36
East Hardwick, VT 05836
USA

Tel: + 1 (802) 472-3505
www.localfutures.org
info@localfutures.org

Local Futures